For example, if a contact pair is defined for surface_1 and surface_2 and "automatic" general contact is defined for the entire model, Abaqus/Standard generates a contact exclusion for general contact between surface_1 and surface_2 so that interactions between these surfaces are modeled only with the contact pair algorithm. These automatically generated contact exclusions are in effect ...

About general contact in Abaqus/Standard

For example, if a contact pair is defined for surface_1 and surface_2 and "automatic" general contact is defined for the entire model, Abaqus/Explicit would generate a contact exclusion for general contact between surface_1 and surface_2, so that interactions between these surfaces would be modeled only with the contact pair algorithm. These automatically generated contact exclusions are ...

About general contact in Abaqus/Explicit

The contact inclusion and exclusion options (discussed in About general contact in Abaqus/Standard) apply to the surface-to-surface contact formulation, the edge-to-surface contact formulation, and the edge-to-edge contact formulation (and further control which portions of surfaces may interact with either formulation). The sign of the feature angle is considered when determining whether or ...
